KEY TO PURPOSE SIGNALS USED IN CASE CITATIONS

Accord: A holding which, although it may be distinguishable, substantially upholds the proposition stated. A slighter distinction is indicated by "accord" than by "cf."

But cf.: A decision reaching the opposite result which, although distinguishable, is to be compared with or distinguished from the point under discussion. This symbol is also used for a distinguishable dictum contrary to the point under discussion, in which case dictum page is indicated.

But see: A dictum contrary to the cases cited previously or to the proposition in the text for which it is cited.

Cf.: A case parallel to the proposition for which it is cited but which contains fact materially different.

Contrary: A square holding to the opposite effect of the preceding case, or the proposition in the text to which it is cited.

See: A dictum.

Sembl: Used to indicate the holding of the case is not clear.

No signal preceding the case citation indicates that the case is cited for a square holding. Reprinted in part from A Uniform System of Citation with permission of the publishers.
